

FIGURINES

Once you have the Deluxe Picto Box, you can start taking full-color snapshots of Great Sea denizens. That's not all the camera is good for, however—if you take the shots to a special location, a master craftsman will turn them into collectible figurines.

ALL IN THE TIMING

It is possible to collect all 134 figurines during the first quest, but you must get the Deluxe Picto Box at the earliest possible moment and take certain shots at certain times. Since you automatically have the Deluxe Picto Box in the second quest (assuming you found the Picto Box in the first quest), it's easier to play through the game once, then build a figurine collection during the second quest. The next few pages show you every figurine and tell you where to find the person or creature so you can take a picture. If special circumstances are present (such as a person only appearing at night), it is noted as well. Some characters have multiple figurines, but you need to take only one picture. A few photos are available from Lenzo.

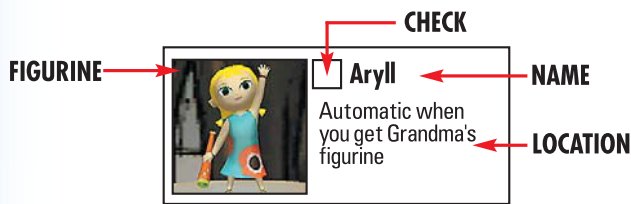

Take pictures of the four main dungeon bosses inside Ganon's Tower.

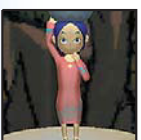

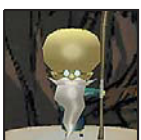

In the first quest, you have only one chance to capture Tetra on film, after you defeat the Helmaroc King.
